JULY PROGRAM REPORT

PCNS President William D. Hyder spoke on

The Santa Cruz Venetian Water Carnival 1895–1896

Bill noted that his interest in the topic had been piqued by chancing upon an unlisted so-called dollar for this event, begun in 1895. The Venetian Water Carnival was a money-raising event to help businesses rebuild following the 1894 Santa Cruz fire which had destroyed the downtown area. Part of the goal was to refurbish the town's water supply, which had been allowed to deteriorate so the cisterns didn't work to fight fires! Though the event itself lost money, it brought income to local businesses by drawing large numbers of visitors to the event for many days. Sponsor J.P. Smith promised to underwrite the event's losses if the town would approve holding it at least another year, which was approved.

Bill showed examples of the printed programs, badges and ribbons sold by school children, and even paper share certificates which were sold for $1 per share to raise money. It's unclear whether the Shares were intended to have any redemption value, but they have not survived in quantity.

Smith's daughter was named Queen of the 1895 event, which may have had something to do with her daddy funding it.

The Coastal Rail Road ran from San Francisco to Santa Cruz to make attendance easier from more populous areas. A So-Called Dollar was struck by Moise of San Francisco, but it's unclear how these were marketed. Metal badges were sold for both years in several designs.

The Santa Cruz Boardwalk area was a continuing reminder of these carnivals, hosting parades reminiscent of the Water Carnivals into the 1960s.

Bill's winning paper on this subject will be published later this year.
