Dan Hipple presented Michael Wehner with a second-place medal the 2018 papers contest.

Michael's prize-winning paper from 2017 about a fascinating San Francisco character was the topic of his presentation, "Moses Gunst Has Went".

Moses Gunst was born in New York in 1853 and moved to San Francisco in 1871. He opened his own cigar store by 1873 and eventually his own firm, M.A. Gunst & Co. The firm specialized in wholesale cigar store supplies and included a chain of retail cigar stands throughout the country. This business made Moses a wealthy and influential man and he was appointed to a position as one of the San Francisco Police Commissioners. In the late 19th century, San Francisco politics were incredibly corrupt. Although gambling was technically illegal in San Francisco, Moses ran his own slot machine and gaming operations and used his influence as a Police Commissioner to suppress his competition. Local newspapers often wrote unflattering articles about his gambling operations as well as his frequent long trips out of town. He was also involved in a nose tweaking involving a local attorney. "Moses Gunst has went" would be announced in the newspaper to call attention to his travels out of town. On one trip to Europe, Moses was treated to a banquet during a stop in New York City. Michael exhibited a medal that that was likely a souvenir of that dinner. The obverse of the engraved silver medal states Complementary Dinner to Police Commissioner Moses A. Gunst of San Francisco by Deputy Chief W.W. McLaughlin and Chief of Detectives George A. McClusky Sept. 26, '99. The reverse includes a list of other guests most of which could be found in the New York City Directories of 1899 and 1890. One guest listed, J. Henry Rothschild was a milliner and father of writer Dorothy Parker. For the most part, Moses ended his involvement in politics at the end of his term in 1899. In 1913 he sold controlling interest in M.A. Gunst & Co. Inc and remained on as a Director. Gunst died on 1928 but left a few other items to his numismatic legacy including an M. A. G. & Co. slot machine tokens, a five cent trade token from M. A. Gunst & Co. - The House of Staples as well as paper cigar coupons from the same.
